

International Women's Day

What does being a woman at Sixense mean?

Let's hear from Sixense female employees from all over the world on this topic

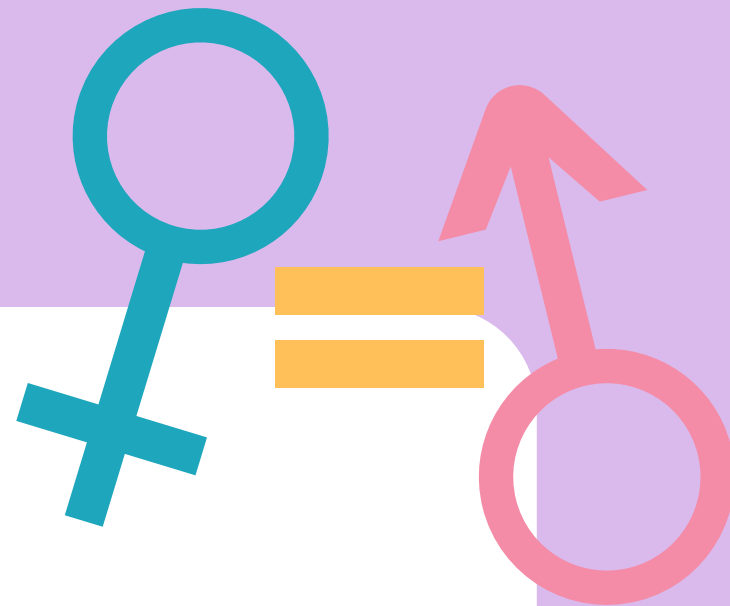

#Trailblazing

Coming from a STEM field as a woman, particularly in engineering, means that you often don't get to see yourself in your coworkers and leaders. I am proud that here at Sixense, not only do I see a focus on acquiring and retaining female-identifying persons, but also I find that the feminine perspective in this often male-centric field is sought after, and our voices are heard and acted upon.

Joanne Berger
Data Manager
1 year of service

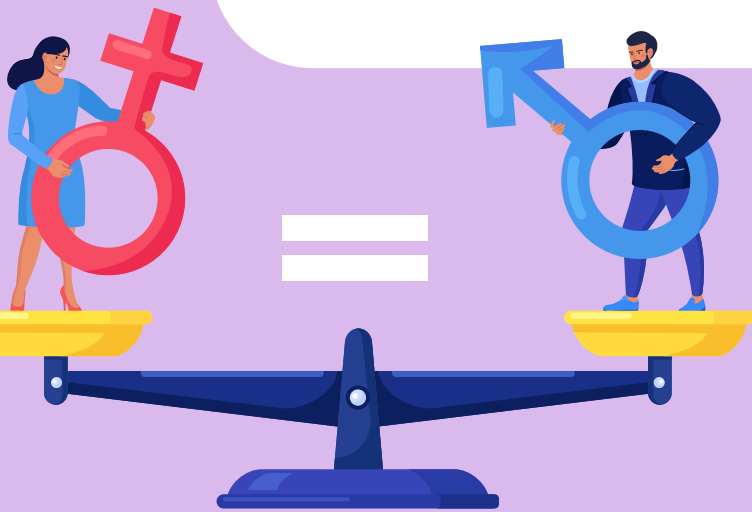

#Equity

For me, being a woman at Sixense means actively working towards an environment where all women can thrive, thereby contributing to the construction of a legacy of equity for future generations.

Mónica Hernández

Accountant and General Administrative 4 years of service

sixense

#Proud

As a woman at Sixsense, I am proud to represent an organization that values equality and diversity.

Kirstin Smock
Financial Controller
2 years of service

#Diversity

Being a woman at Sixense means diversity—bringing unique perspectives and experiences to the table, enriching our work environment, and fostering innovation.

Coralie Horel
Monitoring Technician
10 months of service

Sense of Purpose and #Fulfillment

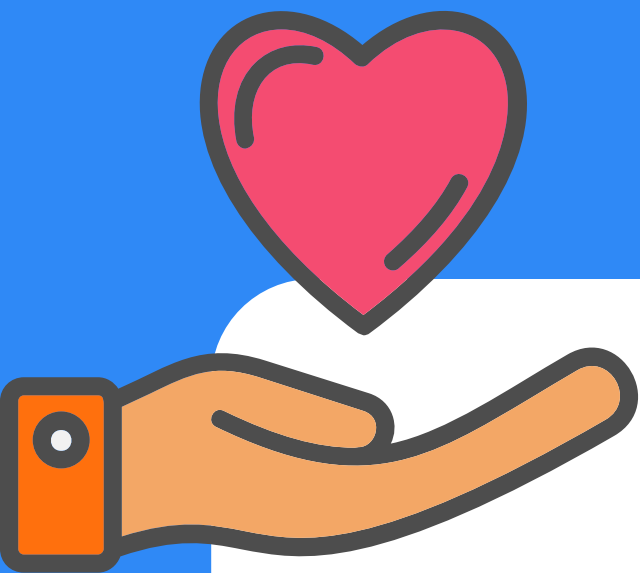

For me, being a woman at Sixense means working in a caring company that offers equal opportunities and impactful work.

Mariana Garstea

General Manager of Sixense S-E Europe
9 years of service

#Valued

Sixsense epitomizes diversity and inclusion, creating an environment where I consistently feel genuinely valued and my needs are consistently addressed.

Indu Gurung
QA/QC and Office Manager
17 years of service

sixsense

#Color

For me, as a woman at Sixense, it's about contributing to a company where diversity flourishes, adding a vibrant spectrum of color to a landscape often dominated by men.

Lucia Zhu
Assistant Accountant
7 months of service

#Community

As a woman at Sixsense, I enjoy being a part of a community that strives to make sure every voice is heard. It means that I have the chance to share my unique perspective openly and can learn from my diverse colleagues.

Madison Lewis
Marketing Coordinator
2 years of service

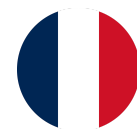

#Responsibility

A large number of positions of responsibility are held by women

Sissa Bekombo Priso

Urban Resilience Project Manager

2 years of service

sixsense

#Growth

Being a woman at Sixsense means growing our diverse company culture. A company with a strong diverse culture (sex, age, experience, culture, ...) creates greater opportunities for innovative thinking and new perspectives - key fundamentals for future success.”

Reigna Johnson

Administrative Assistant & Office Manager
2 years of service

Thank you!

These testimonials are from women from various parts of the world who work for Sixense. We are proud of the women who work at Sixense and strive to make the group move forward every day. Our commitment to gender equality and diversity is reflected in the daily training of our teams.

